Sudan: Nearly one third of the new Sudanese cabinet members are believed to belong to the Communist Party. One is a Central Committee member.

The Communists were among the first to support last week's student riots. [They reportedly achieved their major cabinet role only after overcoming strenuous opposition from more moderate groups during the cabinet negotiations.]

President Abboud has been retained as nominal head of state and director of military affairs with limited legislative veto powers, but the National Front negotiators apparently made [no further] compromises to the military in forming the coalition cabinet. few

The prominent role of the Communists is likely to provoke an early counter-move by independent elements in the army.

NOTES

Congo (Brazzaville): Leftists tightened their grip on the Brazzaville regime this week by purging the two leading moderates from the cabinet. The leftists now are preparing for a new attempt to bring the Catholic trade unions--one of the few remaining centers of opposition to the government's radicalism--into a single labor organization controlled by the regime's Marxist-oriented political party. A national labor congress intended to accomplish this has reportedly been scheduled for 5-8 November.
